An open fire pit and candlelit red tables scattered cabaret-style across the dark club give Dante's a cozy glow. The nightly inferno shifts from alt-rock bands to sultry torch singers to R&B regulars Soul Kitchen with Black Angel, packing the small dance floor to capacity every Thursday night. An adjoining room with a second bar, a pool table and a classic Asteroids video game holds the overflow from the intimate space. On Monday nights, the entertainment is karaoke with a live band to make participants feel like rock stars for a moment. Audience members swallow off-key notes with cocktails and pizza by the slice. -- Karen Vitt

This bar is almost gaurenteed to be hosting a great evening of rocking music on any night you happen to stop in. Though it may not be as large as some of Portlands other bars, you will find reasonable prices and " Low Dough " Thursdays. This is a pretty popular venue though, so you may want to get there a little earlier than you would other bars.
